

Hello

There're a lot of US testimonials to Captain Bob but we don't see none that gives the British angle on things so we thought we'd put that right see. Crikey where do we start? Alright he's a "septic tank" but don't let that worry your loaf of bread, cos he's a diamond geezer. We've done this sailing lark with Bob several times over the years and it's been cushty and we've well enjoyed ourselves and he's become a bit of a china. You don't have to worry about nothing. He sorts the boat out for decent bread and honey, works out where you're going , what's best for the wind and all that nautical malarkey.

North Dodecanese, Greece Sail

South Dodecanese, Greece Sail

Decent cove he is and seems to know what he's doing and aint never hit a ferry yet nor a quay which is easier said than done cos the first don't give a monkey's and the second is well solid . You know after a really spirited sail you can spend a very pleasant tea-time snug up against a quaint island town-harbour with a cold kitchen sink in your hand with some Vincent in it, watching folk of all nations batter their hired boats up against the wall. And Bob don't never do that. Smooth he is. If you can drive the nanny goat he'll let you drive, if you can't drive and fancy a bit of posing like Pugwash he'll teach you .If you don't, you can sit on your 'arriss, just watch the world go by!

Lovely.

It's no good I can't keep this Mockney up any more...I'm from Yorkshire anyway and live in Northumberland near the Scottish border so we don't talk like that anyway although Bob says I am the only person he's heard use "Crikey" in everyday speech . We have taught him some Northumbrian and he knows what a"Netty" is now so he doesn't

Amalfi Coast, Italy Sail

Corfu, North Ionian, Greece Sail

confuse us with Americanisms like “comfort station”. We’ve sailed with Bob over many years in the Ionian, Dodecanese, Croatia, Catalonia and on the Amalfi coast. Cabin Charter sailing is really a great way to have a holiday-sail on a good-sized boat at reasonable cost without having to worry about the responsibility of skippering. It’s also a very good way of meeting like-minded but different people both to sail with and to sit down with in a Taverna or Cantina and spent a very pleasant post-sailing evening over a meal and a glass.

Oh and Bob does exist...We have sent our hard-earned dosh spinning away into the ether and it gets there right as rain and when you turn up there he is beside your boat as large as life...well to be honest slightly larger . We would recommend trying Cabin Charter Sailing with him , cos as well as a good time there’s a very nice “Dicky Dirt” you can wear into port, what we refers to as livery and makes you look like a proper yachtie.

Go on give it a go why don’t you. .

Stewart & Gillian

Costa Brava, Spain Sail